DIVES TO DEATH FROM THE EADS BRIDGE ON DARE

George M. Lorenz, an Expert Swimmer and Diver, Sought Fourth of July Triumph to Silence the Banting of His Friends.

CRAZED BY THE FALL HE NEARLY DROWNS RESCUER

Capt. Mullen Dragged Beneath the Water Six Times in Struggle to Save Him—Hold Relaxes on Veteran River Man and Body Disappears

Because he would not take a dare, George M. Lorenz, 21 years old, of 3645 Cote Britannique avenue, dived from the center span of Eads bridge at 10:45 o'clock Monday noon and was drowned in the Mississippi river.

The wind straightened his body out as he neared the water and he struck on his stomach. He was stunned and the efforts made to save him by friends who were on a launch were unavailing.

His jump and drowning were witnessed by a number of men who were on the launch. His body has not been recovered.

Lorenz, who was a protege of Prof. Bill Clark, manager of the Natatorium, was an expert swimmer and diver. He had often dived from the rafters at the Natatorium to the pool and his admirers bantered him to jump from Eads bridge from which a number of successful dives have been made.

He at first did not take to the suggestion and his friends dared him to do it. He then said he would do it.

Planned Triumph for Fourth of July.

The jump had been under contemplation for several weeks. It was finally decided to have it occur on the Fourth of July.

All arrangements were made which it was thought would insure a safe jump. The launch D'Artagnan was engaged to go to the center of the river and pick him up after the dive. Capt. Clark was on board.

At 10:30 o'clock Lorenz, accompanied by John E. and Eugene, started across the river. Murphy of 2009 Olive street was left out on the bridge from the St. Louis side.

Lorenz was fully clad, in a light spring suit and tan shoes, and there was nothing about the party to attract the attention of the bridge officers.

The south side of the bridge at the center span had been picked out as the spot for the leap.

Flag Around His Waist.

When the three men reached that point there were not more than ten people in sight on the bridge. Lorenz quickly threw off his shoes and clothing and stood forth in a red swimming suit, with the American flag draped around his waist.

By that time the group had gathered attention and several persons were coming toward them, but there was no need for haste and Lorenz prepared for the leap with deliberation. He climbed upon the rail and stood there for a moment, measuring the distance and the angle calculating how he would make the leap.

"Now, go ahead, George," said Murphy, who was coaching him, and who saw that everything was in readiness.

Lorenz brought his hands together above his head and permitting his body to sway outward, suddenly sprang clear of the rail and shot downward head first toward the water.

Strong Wind Caught Him.

To those who were looking it seemed like a perfect dive. His body shot straight down until it was within 35 feet of the water.

The strong wind which was sweeping through the span seemed to catch his body and straighten it out almost horizontally. He struck the water in that position.

The launch, which had put out from the foot of the bridge, had been held against the current, with the prop up stream, about 40 yards below the bridge.

Lorenz Was Unconscious.

He went only a little way under the water and by the time he reappeared he was close to the launch. In another instant the swift current had carried him alongside.

Then it seemed that a blinder was made by the water on Lorenz, for he was leaning over the side and catching him, as it appeared possible, they threw him a line. He did not know who it was, for his mind was thrown to him. That also was wrong, for by that time it was seen that the diver was out of him and left him dazed and all but helpless.

Capt. Mullen, an old river man, was one of the passengers on the launch. He was in a swimming suit, ready to render the

The wire will go from the Coliseum to Washington, to Princeton and to Esopus, N. Y.

RIFLE, SMALL BOY, VICTIM MAY DIE

Frank McCabe Probably Fatally Shot
by Carleton Kelsey, Who Was Shooting at Target.

Frank McCabe, aged 20, is dying at the City Hospital as the result of a bullet wound received at 7 o'clock Monday morning from a bullet discharged from a rifle in the hands of Carleton Kelsey, aged 14, of 450 Forest Oak boulevard, who was trying to celebrate the Fourth of July by shooting at a target. The boy has been arrested.

A little before 7 o'clock the Kelsey boy went into the back yard, placed a target on the ground and began firing at it. He fired several shots and then heard someone coming.

The Kelsey boy says he thought McCabe was in the alley when he began shooting, and that he did not know he had entered the woodshed.

TMANY, SAVE A FEW MCCLELLAN BOOMERS, SICK OF FIGHT ON PARKER

TAMMANY'S PARKER RESOLUTION SHOWS WHERE NEW YORK'S VOTE WILL GO IN SPITE OF MURPHY

Following resolution offered by Senator Grady of Tammany Hall, on behalf of the minority of the committee on resolutions at the New York state convention, April 8, 1904, as a substitute for instructions, shows conclusively that Tammany, Judge Parker, despite the personal antagonism of its chieftain, Charles F. Murphy:

The Democracy of New York believes that the result of the presidential election now pending involves the very existence of constitutional government in this country, and in such a grave crisis it has no favor to ask of the party in the nation, or of its friends in the state.

However, that the electoral votes of New York are absolutely essential to Democratic success, we submit to our brethren throughout the country that Alton B. Parker, a Democrat in the prime of life, has been elected by a majority of 80,000 to the chief position in the judicial system of this state, and during the last six years has discharged the duties of his high office with such unvarying dignity, shining ability, and scrupulous fidelity, that, if his term were to end this year, he would undoubtedly be chosen to succeed himself by the concurring votes of all his fellow citizens."

Supporting the above resolution, W. Bourke Cockran, who now stands with Murphy against Parker, said:

The majority report from the resolutions committee gives no reason why Judge Parker should be nominated. The minority report gives strong reasons why the nomination should be made. The majority asks the nomination as a favor; the minority asks it on Judge Parker's record."

MAN SAYS GORMAN WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE

The following statement was made to the Post-Dispatch today by Louis M. Gorman, delegate from Ohio, and one of John R. McLean's lieutenants: "I have received absolutely direct information that Senator Gorman will not be a candidate, but will support Judge Parker."

The Parker men are so confident of victory that they encourage the election of favorite sons in order that an era of good feeling and good will may prevail. Judge Parker will undoubtedly be nominated."

LEGATES GENERALLY ENDORSE JUDGE PARKER AND PLATFORM DRAFT

The rank and file of delegates from the various states express general approval of the Democratic platform published in the Sunday Post-Dispatch and endorse Judge Parker to stand upon it.

The Post-Dispatch secured the following expressions today from various parts of the country:

ALLEN F. WARD.

Chairman Wisconsin State Central Committee.

The draft of the platform published in the Sunday Post-Dispatch meets with general approval of the Wisconsin delegates.

Instead of voting the financial plank, which is an obvious slap in a certain direction, it might have been better to inject a positive paragraph nailed to the mast that might have forested additional strife, and we have had hands now.

The nominees are concerned the Wisconsin delegation is for Wall first, at the time. We can't see anyone else and don't intend to.

HENRY D. CLAYTON.

National Committeeman From Alabama.

It is known that there will be no important changes in the platform which is to be submitted to the Southern Democratic State-District Convention.

Practically drawn in the cloakroom of Congress during the last session, Democratic members of the National Legislature. Every phase of the platform was gone over, and the Williams platform is the result.

Instructions give Parker the preference and the delegates from Alabama don't to be chafing under them.

BY ALEX STOVAL.

National Committeeman From North Dakota.

OTA in a small way, holding a convention in its own delegation. Four of the states Parker and four for Hearst. Personally, I am a Parker man, and shall do the best I can in the caucus tonight to have the Dakota delegation a solid vote for the Judge.

W. G. Stoval will set upon their candidate. To my mind the platform of the Williams will be worn-out issues and bugaboos. If we can put it

EDWARD W. CARMACK.

Senator from Tennessee, Who Will Second Parker's Nomination.

IN MY judgment no combination can now be formed which will prevent Judge Parker's nomination. Our platform will be a good old-fashioned Democratic platform without any reference to Kansas City or Chicago."

THOMAS T. TAGGART.

National Committeeman From Indiana.

It is like the sun rising slowly but surely to pre-eminence. The statement that Judge Parker is losing strength is all nonsense. On the contrary, he is continually gaining. I should not be surprised to see him nominated on the first ballot.

All this talk of combinations to defeat Judge Parker is without foundation. The combinations may be trying to beat him, but his strength is now so great that it will be impossible to prevent his nomination to his nomination.

There is now really nothing to the race but the roll-call, and I am convinced that it will not require more than two of these to nominate the New York man.

CHARLES A. WALSH.

Secretary Democratic National Committee.

Parker boom is a bubble that has burst. Its managers are trying to create a bandwagon score in order to keep enough delegates to make a showing. The utter folly of their claims will be demonstrated on the first ballot. Parker will have a majority in the convention at any stage.

CHARLES A. CULBERTSON.

United States Senator From Texas.

JUDGE PARKER will be nominated on the second ballot. The Texas delegation is instructed for him, and he will be nominated if he had no instructions. He is the right man, and he will be nominated.

NORMAN E. MACK.

Committeeman From New York.

Nothing in the situation to cause any uneasiness to Judge Parker's. On the contrary, Judge Parker is gaining strength daily and I believe when the convention meets there will be any organized opposition.

H. B. SPAULDING.

National Committeeman From the Indian Territory.

Judge Parker's nomination on the first ballot. When the states see the strength of the New York judge I believe they will be surprised.

JUDGE PARKER'S STRENGTH.

There is no doubt of the steady growth of Judge Parker's strength among the Democrats assembling for the convention. Everyone who dips into the counsels of the men on the ground testifies to the drift toward the New York jurist and to the weakening of the opposition.

The reason for this increasing sentiment for Parker is two-fold. It is due in part to the strength of his position to the spreading recognition of his availability as the choice of New York and other Eastern pivotal states, and of the solid Democratic states, and to the growing confidence in the strength and soundness of the man.

Giving due weight to the disadvantage under which Judge Parker's friends labor by reason of his silence, by reason of that American sentiment in favor of frankness on the part of their public men, there is an element of strength in Judge Parker's silence. Popular government is founded upon publicity, confidence, imagination, and while we believe that Judge Parker would have gained, if he could have reconciled his sense of propriety with a clear and full expression of his views, yet the fact that under tremendous pressure and against repeated warnings of the danger of silence he has persisted in his course indicates a firmness of character, a strength of purpose and a conscientious regard for the proprieties which has won general admiration.

But the drift towards Judge Parker is due in large measure to the essential weakness of the opposition.
There is no common ground except mere obstruction and selfish ambition, upon which the elements opposing Judge Parker's nomination can stand together. There is no principle of coherence binding them. In fact, it may be there is no principle in the continued opposition.

There is no sympathy between Bryan and Gorman. The Pennsylvania delegation cannot support Bryanism, nor can the Maryland, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, nor other delegations from the East and North instructed for favorite sons. Mr. Hearst is an impossibility to any delegation not actually instructed to vote for him. The majority of his delegates fall under Mr. Bryan's own condemnation of the money influence.

Every delegation which stands with Mr. Bryan against Parker must either suffer the condemnation of joining with him to work out his own resentments and personal ambitions at the sacrifice of the party, or of endangering the party's welfare to carry out the selfish purposes of its own leaders.

The delegates who support Mr. Bryan on account of their sympathy with his platform are in a more creditable position than those who are willing to use him as a means of gratifying their own ambitions, or of accomplishing their own selfish objects.

The duty of the delegates to the convention is becoming very clear. It is to strive for harmony without a sacrifice of principle. It is to heed the wishes of the Democrats of the states, the electoral votes of which must be depended upon to elect a Democrat to the Presidency. It is to nominate the most available Democrat who can be relied upon to redeem the pledges of a sound Democratic platform. The action of the delegates to the convention will be judged in the light of this duty.

Solving the situation from the standpoint of party sacrifice, honorable lines and of the party's opportunity to serve the country, the plain duty of the leaders and delegates is to thrust aside personal considerations and all temptation to play politics and join in the support of the man who has the endorsement of the Democrats whose votes count in the election.

Judge Parker represents Democratic opportunity.

The American appeal to the United States government to have them from the Turks will not be answered. But here ought to be humanity enough in the cabinets of Europe to put a stop to these horrors.

ROOSEVELT AND ADDICKS.

When Theodore Roosevelt and Gas Addicks snuggle up together in some political bed it is reasonable to suppose that the expedient in politics has become very practical indeed.

It is announced that Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Spooner are going to Delaware to whoop up the state for Roosevelt and Addicks. The electoral vote must be obtained for Roosevelt and the Senatorship for Addicks.

There was a time when Theodore Roosevelt would not touch Addicks. The thought of the gas man made him shudder. He declared he would never vote for Addicks.

These are the days of gas work, plenty of it.

of this base bargain. He controlled the convention and when the national committee seated the Addicks delegates
he took the burden of the corruptionist's reputation upon his own shoulders. He cannot escape the odor of gas.

The bargain, moreover, reveals the moral condition of the party of great moral ideas. When electoral votes are obtained by giving countenance to the doings of men like Addicks there can be little doubt of the character of the party organization.

Such a trust threatens a monopoly whereby trade in a useful article may be restrained and its price unreasonably enhanced, and it matters not that the parties to it have so moderately advanced prices that the sum exacted for the product seems to some persons reasonable. From the decision of Judge Parker in the Envelope Trust case.

TERRITORIAL CONVENTION VOTE.

Today's work of the National Democratic Committee, in its relation to the convention preliminaries, is of the most vital importance. The party is entering upon one of the greatest struggles ever imposed upon an organization seeking the conservation of government by the people and the liberty of the people.

To a degree exceeding the most sanguine expectations
the spirit of reconciliation, and of a new fraternity between Democrats who have been alienated for eight years, has spread and inspired all elements of the party. Bitterness of even six months ago has given place to tolerance and consideration today. A common purpose of progressive well-doing for the common weal has displaced well-nourished resentments. Had this purpose and sentiment existed eight years ago, on the eve of a most historic convention, these United States would still be true to the doctrine which, during a century, made them great.

But misfortune came then in the form of division and ceremony, and without halting now to discuss the question of blame, it behoves all who believe in fundamental Democratic principles to unite in resolutions and action to repair the ravages of the last two disastrous administrations.

But these very considerations emphasize the importance of today's duty of the National Committee. That body not only must determine what names shall appear on the temporary roll call, where contests are presented, but it must consider the question of territorial representation.
The committee does not, of course, possess the power to fix, beyond appeal, the voting strength to be accorded to the territories; but a sound and discreet action on its part is almost certain of confirmation by the convention.

The territories, and the colonies with which the Republican party has burdened our nation, have all sent intelligent representatives here, on invitation, and these gentlemen are qualified to give what must be most comprehensive information as to the needs and the views of the people who are still beyond the pale of statehood. These reports should be accorded the most sincere consideration, and these delegations should have place on the floor of the convention, where their voices may be heard in counsel. But, as our scheme of government gives territorial delegates no vote in congressional legislation, the same sound reasons which apply in that case are equally applicable to conventions. It is distinctly remembered that the most momentous question of that history-making day, and gave the Republican party an immense advantage in the contest that ensued. The territorial delegates to this week's convention represent more convention votes than the state of Ohio. Their 54 votes would, if special interests which usually dictate public policy in new or sparsely settled lands, prompted their united action, wield an immense balance of power in fixing the platform for a party to which they could not contribute one electoral vote or one member of congress. A plan of organization which presents such a possibility is vitally faulty.

There is no spirit of ostracism or intolerance in this suggestion. Neither is it born of suspicion or distrust.
The gentlemen who are here from the territories are here by invitation, and are fully accredited. Our information is that a majority of them are favorable to the candidate who has the sincere support of the Post-Dispatch. But the very fact that there is no issue involving clash of interests or mischief to either a cause or a candidate makes this the opportune time for a needed reform. The Republican party at Chicago took a step indicating that its leaders have been considering the lack of logic in this form of representation. What do our own leaders think?

Connecticut desires to be known as the Constitution state. Colorado has no such ambition. In Colorado the Constitution has been consigned to hades.

THAYER ON PARKER'S DEMOCRACY.

Judge Amos M. Thayer of the United States Circuit Court is a man whose natural bent of mind and long judicial experience especially qualify him to discern the elements of a candidate's fitness for high public office. He has been distinguished on state and federal bench for his judicial habit of mind, sense of justice and practical wisdom. Being the author of one of the greatest decisions on a subject of acute interest to the American people—the Northern Securities decision—his opinions are entitled to the respect due to one who has mastered the great issue. He says:

"Judge Parker is my candidate for President. He is a man of sound and broad Democracy and his candidacy offers the only hope of party success that I can see. He is the right stripe of Democrat, otherwise I should not be for him. I have read his decisions and know his record.
His attitude towards trusts or combinations in restraint of trade is absolutely clear. His judicial opinions on that point are sound and definite. I hope he will be nominated and elected."

No better witness of merit and fitness could be desired.
Combinations. Judge Parker's views on this great issue are "absolutely clear," "sound and definite," and his Democracy is "of the right stripe."

Judge Parker has, in his decisions, declared the public policy recognized in the law with regard to those monopolies. It is that monopoly is hateful, contrary to the spirit of freedom and dangerous to social order.

No Democrat need fear to follow where Judge Thayer leads.

The political organ is at all times a nuisance, but it is worst in presidential years.

LOOKING FOR A MICROBE.

Dr. Wetchnikoff of the Pasteur Institute, Springfield, Mass., whose speculations were published in Saturday's Post-Dispatch, thinks he has discovered the cause of old age—that is senility, and knows a remedy.

The cause is a microbe, the remedy another microbe.

For this latter the professor is now searching.

Until he finds it we must do the best we can with the antibiotics furnished by sanity and common sense.

These are the days of gas work, plenty of it.

ture with the others will neutralize the good effect considerably to be expected.

These remedies, however, depend for their efficacy upon a fixed purpose in life and a good conscience. Any man who knows what he is here for, and is at peace with himself and his fellow men, need not fear senile decay if he takes these three remedies. They are perhaps better than the professor's unfound microbe.

When he was a member of the New York Assembly the young Theodore Roosevelt said he regarded Jay Gould and his son (George) "part of an infinitely dangerous order—the wealthy criminal class." The son was a guest at the White House a few days ago.

The chief of police on Sunday sent copies of the mayor's proclamation against the discharge of firearms and the explosion of fireworks to the captains of all the districts.
But then the law, as usual, was not enforced.

Mr. Folk is reported to have said that if Cook is put on the ticket with him he will have to apologize to the people of Missouri. It is doubtful if the apology will be accepted.

WASHINGTON TAKES COMMAND

HE REVIEWS THE COLONIAL TROOPS AT CAM-BRIDGE—A SOLEMN AND AUSPICIOUS MOMENT.

From a Letter of A. B. Green, Esq., to H. Barton, Esq., of This City.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 8, 1775.—Gen. George Washington, the newly appointed commander-in-chief of the Continental army, arrived in Cambridge this afternoon. He was accompanied by Major-General Richard Henry Lee of Virginia. They were escorted by their staffs and several companies of militia.

Gen. Washington left Philadelphia June 21, and at every point on the way was greeted with the greatest enthusiasm.
He is now in his forty-third year, a man of fine presence, a person of commanding wealth, family, himself distinguished in the French and Indian war, and especially in Braddock's campaign of 1755. He is one of the wealthiest men of the country, and is also prominent in politics, having several times in the past 18 years been a member of the House of Burgesses of Virginia, and was a delegate to the second continental congress, now sitting in Philadelphia, and which has elected him to the most responsible position in the army.

Since the arrival of Gen. Washington, high hope has taken possession of the patriots, who believe that he will be able to unite the various bodies of provincial troops into one strong organization able to effectively resist the trained soldiers of Great Britain.

At present the army is composed of men of every sort, from our best citizens to those who have nothing to lose and everything to gain. They are still unorganized and poor discipline prevails. Yet we feel certain that no more patriotic band ever gathered to resist the oppression of tyrants.

Since the passage of the stamp act, March 22, 1765, the rights of our colonists have been ignored. Being taxed with out representation, and the oppressive restrictions placed upon our commerce by Great Britain, are more than we can patiently submit to.

Cats Under Fire.

A lady who was in Port Arthur during the bombardments by Admiral Togo's fleet has described the curious effects produced on cats by the cannonade. "I was at my window during each bombardment," she relates, "but only through the day, because at night I did not dare stir out of bed. In front of me there was a little roof on which five or six cats of the neighborhood collected. Each time there was a bombardment the cats duly arrived, and, having observed them, I, on the second occasion, proceeded to watch them. With my family we passed the hours looking at them. "At each gunshock the cats arched their backs and stiffened their legs and seemed both terrified and furious. Then when a hissing shell arrived it gave the signal for a frightful battle. They jumped at each other, biting the dogs, and seemed to hold each other responsible for what was taking place. The effect was so comical that we could not help laughing, although the occasion did not inspire gaiety. After having fought, the cats retired for awhile, as though bewildered, but as soon as the bombardment began they went through the same business. Each time it was always the same."

ANDREWS DIE WHEN IMMIGRANT SHIP FOUNDERS

Death List of the Norge Disaster, However, Will Not Reach 700, as the First Reports by Survivors Indicate.

MANY HAVE BEEN PICKED UP FROM BOATS BY STEAMERS

Charge That the Vessel Carried Twice as Many Persons as Her Capacity Called For It Is Made—Stories of Rescued Persons.

LONDON, July 4.—The German steamer Energie, bound from Philadelphia for Flushing, which passed Butt of Lewis this morning, signalled that she had on board castaways from the Danish steamer Norge, which founded June 28 off the west coast of Scotland.

The signals did not give the number of men on board the ship, but the death list is uncertain, but certainly less than 700, as was first announced, as that figure counts all dead except the 27 survivors landed at Grimsby, 15 miles southeast of Hull, last night by the steamer Salvia.

The steamer Cervonia has landed 101 survivors at Sternway, Scotland.

The Norge struck a rock in the North Sea last Tuesday, while a heavy sea was on. The waves wrecked the lifeboats as they were placed in the water and the survivors reaching Grimsby thought only two had survived.

The lost boat carried 200 immigrants and a crew of 80. The passengers embarked from Copenhagen and were Norwegians, Swedes, Danes and Finns, bound for American ports.

No passengers were shipped for the first cabin and but nine in the second cabin.

These included three Americans, Elizabeth and Anna Buckley and Hilma Fleischman, residents of New York, the steamer company. The Norge was the oldest Danish transatlantic steamer running.

She sailed from Copenhagen June 22. She was last sighted off the Butt of Lewis (the northernmost point of the Hebrides islands) on June 27. Rockall, the islet on which she struck, is about 200 miles west of the Hebrides. It is a dangerous reef, with a rock about 75 feet above water.

According to the survivors, the moment the vessel struck the engine was reversed and the Norge went into the water. The rent in her bows was so large, however, that she began to fill rapidly.

The vessel's eight boats were swung over the sides rapidly and the women and children were put into them first. There was a heavy sea running and in swaying the boats all but two of them were smashed.

The Norge was an iron vessel of 318 tons gross and 220 tons net. Her principal dimensions were: Length, 360 feet; breadth, 40 feet; depth, 22 feet, and was built at Glasgow by A. Stephen & Sons in 1881, when she was christened Pieter de Coninck.

When she was purchased by the United Steamer Co. of Copenhagen she was renamed the Norge. The vessel was equipped with six watertight bulkheads.

SURVIVORS' STORIES OF THE SINKING OF IMMIGRANT BOAT.

GRIMSBY, England, July 4.—Owing to the strict enforcement of certain regulations and the fact that there is no Danish custom here, all the survivors of the Norge, who arrived here on the steam trawler Salvia, were kept on that vessel all night.

This morning, in the dingy cabin of the trawler, the representatives of the Association of Fishermen over 100 persons, including five women and two children, huddled together.

The two women were in a bunk, one was leaning against the captain's berth, while the other was trying to make a nest.

Two of the women pleaded to see a Danish minister of the gospel, but the one selected here happened to be away. John Johnson, a gray-bearded man from Tromsø, said:

"When the ship first bumped most of us were below. All rushed to the deck, but I had my wife and two children with me. At first none of us was aware of what had happened and we kept quiet, but in a minute we began to move."
